

21st Annual Westwater Intensive Training

Friday, April 27th - Saturday, May 5th 2018

Westwater camp is located on the beautiful high desert of Utah, near the Colorado border. It's about 45 minutes from the closest airport (GJT, Grand Junction, Colorado), or a five hour drive from either Denver or Salt Lake City. Miles away from civilization, students from around the world have found the solitude and nature of the area a powerful adjunct to their study of Taiji for 20 years.

The camp provides no indoor sleeping accommodations. Students are to bring their own tent, or indicate other sleeping arrangement and location, if known, referencing the site map. Temperatures can drop below freezing at night and be hot during the day. The usually dry region is subject to high winds, dust, and intense sun. Besides toiletries, pack towels, flashlight, and other items you may need for your safety and comfort.

All pre-camp arrivals are charged $50 per night with meals included. Volunteers pay only $20.

Camp fees listed on the Registration Form include buffet-style meals prepared on-site mostly by our professional chef. Facilities include large Practice Hall, Dining room, outside toilets, Mens and womens' shower rooms, and use of washing machine with detergent. For more information ask alexdongtaiji@gmail.com

At a wrap-up meeting after last year's Camp, many additional students joined the Steering Committee and brought a lot of new ideas to the table. One suggestion was to solicit voluntary donations for capital improvements benefitting Westwater's infrastructure, safety, and comfort. Alex would receive these donations and prioritize the use of the funds. Anyone interested in participating in this new opportunity should direct payments to Alex Dong. No credit cards at this time, but checks or Paypal are fine. Donations are neither tax deductible, nor applied toward other camp fees
